Relevance of Gender

- "Traditionally, sport has been dominated by men, both in terms of participation and governance. Worldwide, women's participation rates in sporting activities are lower than men's. Yet over the last 20 years significant changes have occurred and the difference in involvement between the genders is becoming narrower."

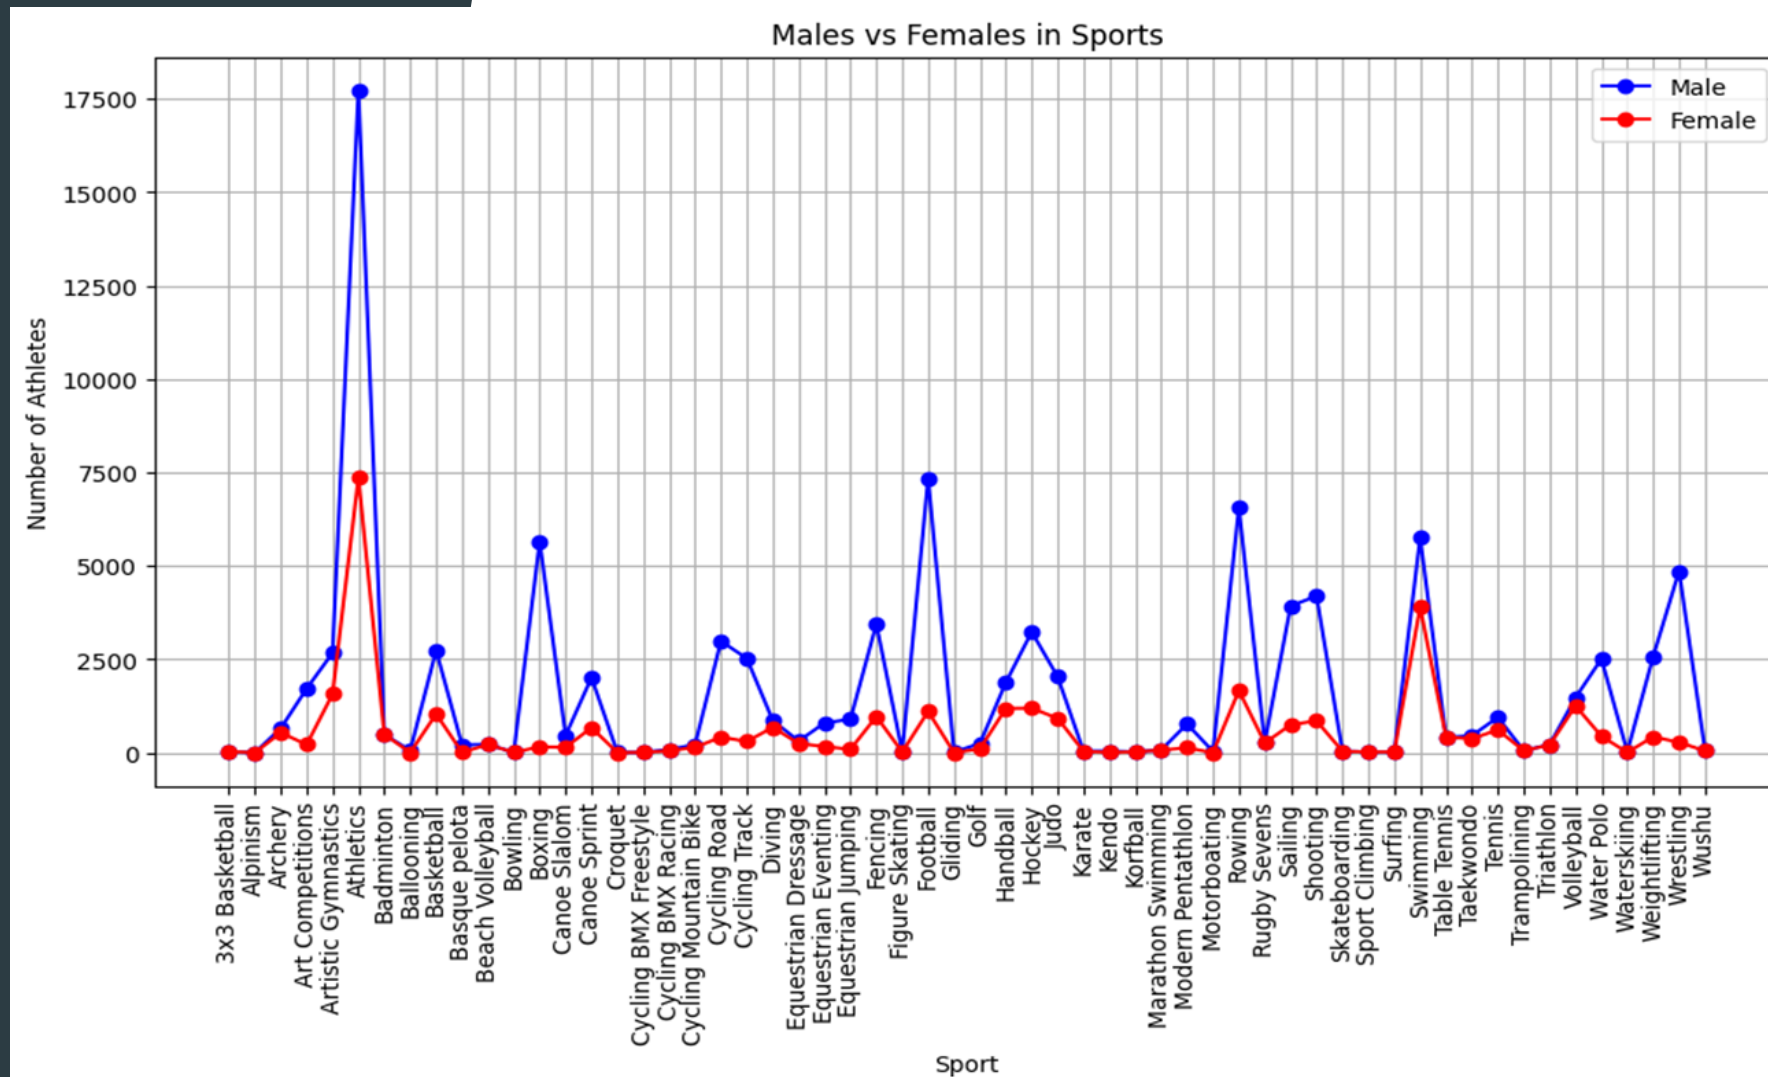

Since 1980, the number of females participating in various fields has been on the rise. This trend reflects broader societal changes. For instance, women's representation in the olympic games has substantially increased over the past four decades.
